

ABSTRACT

A foundation system for a building or other load includes a lower part and an upper sliding raft. The lower part has a generally concave surface at the top thereof.

- 5 The upper sliding raft has a convex surface at the bottom thereof adapted to rest on the concave surface of the lower part and allow for sliding rotational movement therebetween. The building or other load is attached to the upper sliding raft.